

VILLA'S FORCES HOLDING CANANEA

Large Number Of Men Left Behind In The Trenches With Artillery.

DOUGLAS, Ariz., Nov. 17.—Gen. Alvaro Obregon's army expects to strike its first blow today at the Villa army under command of Gen. Rodriguez, which, unknown to the Carranza leader, contrived secretly to take strong positions around Cananea, 10 miles south of Naco. They have been engaged in entrenching for several days.

Rodriguez is responsible for spreading false reports of his movements and evasion of Cananea. The actual number of his army is unknown, but it is admitted by Carranza officials that Rodriguez's main strength lies in his artillery.

All Cannon at Cananea. Practically every cannon Villa brought from Chihuahua is said to be disposed around the big, American-owned mining camp. Col. Lazaro Cardenas, after driving back a small advance guard at Villa Verde yesterday, discovered that to advance was to fall into a trap laid by the Villa commander.

Therefore he halted and sent word late last night to Obregon of this discovery, together with statements made by some of the prisoners captured by his force.

Villa at Magdalena. According to these men, Villa's southern army is now mobilizing at Magdalena for an advance on Gen. Diezguis at Hermosillo.

Rodriguez's army, claimed to be 5000 strong, was left in the north to combat the southward and westward advance of Obregon's forces.

Chief Urbalejo commands the vanguard of Villa's southern army at Pesquero, awaiting the arrival of the main body before advancing. Obregon's main body of 4000 infantry and artillery with 20 cannons and 45 machine guns were started southward in the movement from Naco, Sonora, this morning. It is expected they will join Cardenas's 2500 cavalry and make an assault on Rodriguez's positions, either this afternoon or tomorrow morning. Between 20 and 30 Americans are now in Cananea and will be endangered by the fighting if it takes place around the town proper. Several million dollars worth of American-owned substantial business and residence property, as well as smelters, concentrators and mine equipment will be under fire or Carranza's army.

Neither Side Wishes Nogales. Neither faction apparently cares to occupy Nogales, Sonora, in force, and depending upon fighting units in the interior to decide which shall control the border port. Obregon's advance took all but about 500 troops out of Naco.

The Southern Pacific railroad between Naco and Del Rio is being rapidly repaired, allowing the southward advance of the Carranza force to be more rapid than would otherwise be possible. Obregon considers Villa Trapped. Gen. Obregon at Naco with 4000 men, nine field pieces and 14 machine guns, considered Villa trapped between two Carranza armies, his only chance of escape being in the direction of Chihuahua. Villa may already be seeking this way out, it was indicated by reports that part of his troops had appeared at Arippe, 75 miles southeast of Naco and approximately 100 miles from the point where he entered Sonora from Chihuahua.

Strong Forces Surround Villa. Obregon has 6500 troops at various places along the border, while at Hermosillo and Guaymas Gen. M. M. Diezguis has 14,000 men, including 6000 who have reached Guaymas from the south. It is no disclosed that the nearest Villa approached to Hermosillo was Carls, 45 miles north of the Sonora capital. His forces are reported stretched from Magdalena to Arippe.

Can Take Nogales Easily. Though Villa left 500 Yaquis at Nogales, Sonora, as a guard for his government, Carlos Randall, Carranza official, declare they can take the border town whenever they desire.

Villa Forces Routed. Col. Lazaro Cardenas, commanding 2500 Carranza cavalry, is reported to
